

August 11 is National 811 Day

Celebrated each year on August 11 (8/11), National 811 Day reminds homeowners and contractors to contact 811 before starting any digging project.

Many essential utility lines, including water, wastewater, natural gas, electric, communications, and internet services, are buried underground. Even routine projects like planting a tree, installing a mailbox, building a fence, or digging for a patio can accidentally damage these lines if their locations aren't marked first.

Striking an underground utility line can disrupt service, lead to costly repairs, and create serious safety hazards.

The good news? Putting safety first is easy.

One free call or online request gets underground utility lines marked before you dig, helping protect you, your neighbors, and critical infrastructure.
